To Whom It May Concern:

SAVE THE DATE!

May 12-14, 2010: MARE Center, Middleburg, VA

May 17-19, 2010: MARE Center, Middleburg, VA

I wanted to make you aware of a program that Virginia Cooperative Extension is coordinating in May 2010. The Technical Large Animal Emergency Rescue (TLAER) program teaches emergency responders and other people interested in the horse industry how to use the latest concepts and equipment in emergencies and disasters involving horses. It also teaches how to use equipment emergency responders may already have to solve TLAER incidents and how to interact with other resources that may exist in a given community. This 3-day program includes a combination of lectures, presentations, and hands-on training. We will accept 30 participants for each program as well as 30-50 auditors. Participants will be involved in the hands-on training as well as lectures and presentations, and will receive a completion certificate from TLAER at the end of the program. Auditors will be able to attend the lectures and presentations but will not participate in the hands-on training. Auditors will receive a certificate of completion from Virginia Cooperative Extension. Lunch for all three days and dinner for one day will be included for both participants and auditors. Preliminary fees are expected to be around $300.00 for participants and $125.00 for auditors. The final fees will be dependent upon sponsorship support.

More information will be forthcoming in January 2010. If you would like to ensure that you receive future notifications, please fill out the attached form and send it to:
